

MCOL e-Dictionary Windows Help Format Support Page

When you selected the e-Dictionary in Windows Help Format from the main menu, the Dictionary launches with an opening Welcome statement that reminds you to select the Help Topics button to open the Index where you can search for individual terms.

After the Index opens, you can start typing a term in the first box, and any term that starts with the letters you have typed so far will appear in the second box. For example, if you just type the letter "c", all terms beginning with "c" will appear.

Alternatively, you don't have to use the first box, and you can just scroll through the second box to find a term.

Either way, once you find a desired term in the second box, select it and click the display button.

After your desired term and definition appear, you can select the Print button, or just select the Help Topics button again to do another search.

You can also navigate one term at a time using the forward and back arrows, and the Back button.
